DON'T LEAVE THE FARM.

Come boys, I have something to tell you. Come near, I would whisper to you. You are thinking of leaving the homestead. Don't be in a hurry to go. The city has many attractions. But think of the vines and sines; When once in the vortex of fashion, How soon the course downward begins!

You talk of the mines of Australia— They're wealthy in gold, no doubt; But there's no gold in the farm boys. I only would shew it out. The mine is a hazardous thing. The goods are first and then low; Better risk the old farm awhile longer— Don't be in a hurry to go!

The great busy West has inducements. And so has the quiet East. But wealth was not made in a day, boys— Don't be in a hurry to start! The bankers and brokers are wealthy. They take in their thousands of so. Ah! think of their frauds and deceptions— Don't be in a hurry to go!

The farm is the safest and surest. The orchards are loaded to-day. You're free as the air of the mountains. And the work goes merrily on. Better stay on the farm a little longer, Though profitless in rather slow; Remember you're nothing to risk, boys— Don't be in a hurry to go!

FARM MUSIC.

In the morning, dim and sweet, Slanting light the sun; The milkmaid trips with hurrying feet, The farmer's day's begun. Hark! To the merriment of the day, As he sharpens the rusty scythe— Crank, crank—crank, crank! In the dewy morning air.

In the summer, near to noon, Flaming clouds the sun; The scythe-blades sweep to a pleasant tune, And the task goes merrily on. Hark! To the merriment of the day, As he sharpens the rusty scythe— Crank, crank—crank, crank! In the dewy morning air.

The primrose waits to bloom, Downward rolls the sun; The west is fire, the east is gloom, The mowers' task is done. And hark! To the merriment of the day, As he sharpens the rusty scythe— Crank, crank—crank, crank! In the dewy morning air.

FARM AND HOME.

Be a Farmer.

Hon. Albert Gallatin Brown, who never knew defeat and has filled all the offices in our republican government, below that of President, which ambition could crave, addresses these words of counsel, as the result of his own experience, to the young men.

[From the Clarion.]

Looking back over a long, and I hope not unfruitful life, I can say with a clear conscience, my greatest regrets is that I ever made a political speech, or held an office.

There is a fascination in office which beguiles men, but be assured my young friend it is the fascination of a serpent, or of a change of figure. It is the ignis fatuus which coaxes you on to inevitable ruin.

I speak of that which I do know. If my young friends will be governed by my advice, I have this to say, after all my successes as a public man, now when my head is blossoming for the grave, I feel that it would have been better for me, if I had followed the occupation of my father, and been a farmer.

The mechanic arts are all honorable. To be a blacksmith, a carpenter or an artisan of any sort is no discredit to any man. Better that than to be a jack-leg lawyer, a quack doctor, counterfeiter or worse still, a wretched seeker after of vice.

Of all the pursuits in life, that of a farmer is the most respectable. It may have its trials, and its disappointments, so do all others. The mechanic may lose the wages of his labor, the professional man all his fees, the editor may weep over delinquent subscribers, but the honest, industrious farmer is morally certain of a fair return for his labor.

True, "Paul may plant, and Apollon water, but God must give the increase." But where is the faithful cultivator of the soil, God's heritage to man, who ever yearns for bread?

Allow me again to "caution" my young friends against the beguiling influence of office, and to advise them most earnestly to stick to mother Earth.

Dairy Maxims.

Milk will sour quicker if the cows are fed sour milk. This is not objectionable for butter making, but it is objectionable for cheese making.

Cream from a farrow cow's milk will not come if churned with cream from new milk cows. The mixed cream will make more butter than the cream from new milk cows alone, but not as much as if the cream is churned separately.

If I were receiving milk from low, swampy ground, or from pastures filled with weeds, or from pastures in which I would drive away the taint, but the scalding would also drive away the aroma of the timothy, clover, or June grass.

Cream can be raised by freezing, but it is not practical in this country.

If milk is kept at a low temperature, the cream rises slowly.

The effect of a sudden change in milk or cream is to injure the keeping quality of butter.

When, as it comes from the factory, invariably has a bad effect when fed to cows. If fed while fresh and sweet, it is not objectionable.

Raising cream by freezing does not expel the animal oil. Neither does it destroy germs in milk.

The cream which rises first makes a better quality of butter than that which rises last.

The more aroma in butter, the less time it will keep. So with cheese.

In the Spring I would work the cream into the cheese, to ripen it sooner and make it better, and work it off at Spring prices. Later in the season would skim more.

CHICKEN CHOLERA.

This is a malady of which little is known. We have obtained all the information we could, respecting this disease, since it first prevailed at the west a few years ago. There is a very malignant type which almost always proves fatal, and a milder form which appears in some localities, destroying not more than half or one-third of the birds attacked. The best medicine that has been reported, is alum water made strong, and given for drink, mixed with their food. Many of the medicines advertised for the cure of the disorder are entirely worthless.

A Veteran Farm Hand.

It is generally supposed, says the Albany Evening Journal, that when a man reaches the allotted age—three score years and ten—and that he is not capable of doing as much hard labor as a man of forty or fifty years. And when he passes three score and ten, and even exceeds ninety, it is something wonderful if he retain the full possession of his faculties, and is able even to do a few small chores about the premises. But we can cite the case of James Cameron, a farm hand in the employ of Mr. Sloan, about eight miles from the city, who is now verging on his ninety-fourth year, and is hale and hearty as most men at fifty. He is now engaged in harvesting, and does a full day's work with the rest, taking his turn at mowing, cradling, or reaping, and fulfilling all his tasks with perfect satisfaction to his employer, and we may say, himself. He fully earns his $2 per day, the wages that are paid to the most efficient hands, and sustains his declining years by his own exertions, independent of kith or kin. The old gentleman is blessed with perfect health, a clear understanding, and a vigorous constitution, and will probably yet live to be classed among the centenarians. He belongs to a race of long lived people, his mother having attained the astonishing age of one hundred and eighty years at her death.

Turnips.

These are cultivated at the South chiefly for "greens"—and where this is the object in view, the old-fashioned seven-top variety is greatly superior to any other, being hardier and better adapted to our climate. But, where the object is to produce roots, other varieties should be selected—Rutabagas and purple-top, or Flat Dutch. The first is the most nutritious—the last two the most certain. For table use, in the latter half of winter, a white-fleshed variety of Rutabagas, called Sweet German, we have found, as stated by S. Ped, decidedly the best. It is very sweet, has little disposition to run to seed, and is, therefore, eatable quite late in the spring.

Rutabagas should be planted between the first and middle of the month—Flat Dutch and purple top from the middle of August to the middle of September.

Turnips must have rich ground—and it must have been recently plowed, so as to bring in the finest possible tilth; the latter is almost as important as manure. Cow-pen lots are excellent; on other land, superphosphates or bone dust, make fine crops. By all means sow in drills, (2½ feet apart,) thin out and work the crop.

How to Cook Beefsteak.

—Some time since, a complete encyclopedia of useful knowledge in human form became an inmate of a family. When this learned guest came among them, he was consulted as an oracle in many cases, and was asked one morning: "Would he tell or show them a better way to cook the steak for breakfast?" He took the thin, long-handled frying-pan from his nail, and, putting it on the stove, heated it quite hot. In this he put the pieces of steak, previously pounded, but, to their surprise, did not put a particle of butter in the frying-pan, and did not salt his steak. He allowed the steak to merely glaze over, and then turned it quickly to the other side, turning it several times in this manner until it was done. Four minutes were not employed on the operation, but a juicier piece of steak was never eaten. It was, when done, laid on the platter, previously warmed, and was buttered and salted and a moment on the hot oven. Allowing the steak to heat but a moment on each side helped it to retain all its sweet juices, and putting on the salt the last moment after it was on the platter drew out its juices.

CANNING OF VEGETABLES.

—The chemical bath in which the cans of vegetables are immersed before their final sealing is used only for the purpose of getting a temperature higher than the boiling point of water. The necessity for this high temperature is due to the fact that the air contained in the can and its contents is more thoroughly expelled, and if the can is entirely void of air there can be no change in the condition of its contents. A boiling heat will expel all the air, but longer time is needed than with a higher temperature. For domestic purposes the bath of boiling water is sufficient. It is only necessary to cook vegetables (except salt) in the can, to solder the cover on perfectly airtight, to make a pin-hole in the cover, and then immerse the can in a boiling water bath without covering the upper parts, and, when it has been exposed to the boiling heat for ten minutes, seal with a drop of solder upon the pin-hole.

Paschal Morris says in his Practical

Farmers that the prevention of grapes in poultry is usually accomplished in the practice of many persons of his acquaintance. He simply puts the hens with their young broods on the barn floor and keeping them there, off the damp ground and wet grass, and away especially from putrid and foul water. The barn doors, kept wide open they have the benefit of sun and air, and a small heated front, or wire screen, keeps them in until past the age when there is danger from this disease.

The south for the future should send representative men to congress—such men as Lamar, who commands the respect of every Radical. Lamar was an original secessionist. He reflected the sentiments of the southern people before the war, and in his speech on the death of Sumner, he again echoed the desire of the south for peace and perfect restoration.—Appeal.
